"The lion didn't break loose" last Tuesday as it did once upon a time, to which the memory of Fayetteville bloods extendeth.

"It is not good for man to live alone."

We are at present living under the inconvenience of the above scriptural injunction, as our wife for good reason has left (for a short time) our bed and board; another injunction is to "increase, multiply and replenish the earth." To those who have lived up to the last named command, we take pleasure in notifying that we are receiving our full stock of goods which, amongst other attractions, we will have a thousand and one things on our five and ten cents counter that will for their usefulness and cheapness surprise the most credulous. As usual we will have the celebrated Bay State Shoe Leather Co's standard screw boots and shoes, every pair warranted, at prices to compete with the Yankee pegged work. Our ready-made clothing, hats and ladies' dry goods will be full and complete, so every person come and give an upward "boom" to the fellow that paddles his own "canoe."

Freak of Nature.

Considerable interest was centered for awhile in the discovery on Mr. H. H. Hughey's place in the Swan creek neighborhood of what at first had the appearance of and was thought to be a stone house buried in the ground, but after an investigation the conclusion was arrived at that it is not the work of hands but caused by an upheaval of nature. It extends a distance of forty or fifty yards and is composed of strata of different colored clay and stone forming two inclined planes which come together in a crest. The whole bears a striking resemblance to the roof of a house.

Dr. Alf. S. Fulton

Died in this place on Sunday evening last, after a long intermittent illness. He was born in Fayetteville, and had attained the mature age of 55 years. In 1846 he went to Mexico as a soldier in the Fayetteville Guards. In 1848 he joined the tide that swept overland to California, where he remained a few years, after which he returned to Fayetteville, studied medicine, and began its practice, which he pursued until the late war, when he was elected Colonel of the Eighth Tennessee regiment, which was mustered into the Confederate service and ordered to West Virginia for duty, where it had a rigorous campaign. Failing health finally forced his resignation. After the war he resumed the practice of his profession, but ill health again interfered and compelled him to desist. He then secured the position of Clerk and Master of the Chancery Court which he held a few years, when disease admonished him of the necessity of rest, and his resignation was tendered about two months ago. The funeral Monday evening was largely attended, the sermon being preached by Rev. W. G. Templeton in the C. P. Church. The survivors of his regiment who reside here were present, and at their request, the lid of the coffin was removed in the church, that they might have a last look at the features of their commander. Circuit Court was in session, but adjourned as a token of respect. The burial services were conducted by the Masons at Rose Hill Cemetery.

Circuit Court

Tribute of Respect.

Death has again entered our circle, and claimed for his own one of our noblest and best companions.

The subject of these remarks is Col. Alfred S. Fulton, who was called from labor to refreshment on November 2nd, at about 6 o'clock, p. m.

Col. Fulton was identified with this country for more than a half a century, during which time he acted in such a manner that he won the esteem, love and confidence of the entire community. His life was one of consistency, and no one was ever heard to speak harshly of him. He was the soul of honor and chivalry, as his conduct and bearing exemplified in the wars of Mexico and between the States—Monte-rey, Cherubusco and Cheat Mountain attest to his bravery. Had it not been for the disease that was preying on him at the time, rendering him unfit for service, he, no doubt, would have taken his place and ranked with those heroes that gave their lives in or survived the Lost Cause. He was quiet and unobtrusive, kind and generous, magnanimous and charitable, and in fact he possessed all those ennobling qualities that make a man loved, honored and esteemed by his fellow-men.

As we loved and esteemed Brother Fulton when living, it is our duty, and becomes us as nations, to revere and perpetuate his memory when dead. Therefore, Resolved, That in the death of Brother A. S. Fulton Jackson Lodge, and the fraternity at large, has lost one of its noblest members, and society one of its best men.

Resolved, That this preamble and resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Lodge, and that each of the county papers be requested to publish the same.

Resolved, That the members of this Lodge wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

C. J. BRUCE,
C. B. McGUIRE, Com.
